About decaffeinated Ceylon black tea

Ceylon tea is grown across Sri Lanka's seven main regions, from the high-grown estates of Nuwara Eliya and Uva to the low-grown gardens of Ruhuna. Decaffeinated tea is black tea (Camellia sinensis) from which most of the caffeine has been removed after manufacture.

The two common methods are carbon dioxide (CO₂) extraction, which keeps much of the tea's flavor, and ethyl acetate extraction. Limits on residual caffeine differ by market, often about 0.1 to 0.4% of dry weight. Decaf tea is commonly traded as broken grades suited to tea bags, such as BOP and BOPF, or as fannings.

Common uses

- Tea bags for retail and food service
- Evening and caffeine-sensitive blends
- Flavored and herbal blends
- Iced tea

Storage and documents

Kept sealed, cool and dry, black tea typically keeps two to three years. Buyers commonly ask for a certificate of analysis, the Sri Lanka Tea Board export documentation, a certificate of origin and, for some markets, pesticide residue results. Exact grade, packing, MOQ and price are confirmed on the quote.

What to include in a quote request

A clear request usually states the tea type and leaf grade, the region or elevation preferred if any, the format (bulk chests or sacks, tea bags or retail packs), the quantity per shipment and how often, any private label needs, the destination port and the Incoterm, for example FOB Colombo or CIF. Mentioning the residue limits of the destination market helps the supplier match the right teas.

Organic: ask us for the producer's organic certificate covering your lot with the quote. Certification does not transfer to the buyer: for a US import under USDA NOP, the importer of record must hold its own certification.

Issued by our Trade Desk in Colombo on the date shown. Figures are indicative, not a firm offer. Ask us for a certificate of analysis against your order. Fields marked "Not stated" are confirmed with your quote, never estimated. For a firm price against your quantity, destination and Incoterm, request a quote and we reply with a costed position.
